

Statement from the family of Charles Krauthammer
September 18, 2018

The Krauthammer family wish to extend their deepest thanks to all those who have shared their condolences and expressed such love, respect and admiration for Charles in the months since his death. The extraordinary outpouring of sympathy and support has been a great comfort to the family throughout this most difficult of times.

Charles Krauthammer is gone, but his legacy will live on. His family, his friends and his colleagues are dedicated to preserving and advancing his irreplaceable contributions to the political life of the country he so fervently loved.

When he fell ill, Charles was in the advanced stages of work on a new book, which he entrusted to his son Daniel to complete on his behalf. That book—The Point of It All: A Lifetime of Great Loves and Endeavors—will soon be released, and it is now available for pre-order.

Charles' official website, www.CharlesKrauthammer.com, will provide links where his readers and fans can easily obtain the new book. The website will also house archives and information on Charles' writings and commentary from a career that spanned four decades. It will serve for years to come as the authoritative portal to his life's work and the causes he cared about most deeply. The book, the website and the official social media pages will all be used to preserve Charles' memory and to keep his words and thoughts alive for future generations.
